Hannah Robertson, colored, was arrested yesterday afternoon by Polico Officer Krengel on a charge of shooting John Robertson, her brother. It seems that John went after his sister with an axe, and that she fired at him in self-defense. The ball passed through his shoulder. The wound is not dangerous. The shooting occurred Monday, but was kept quiet until yesterday, when the police heard of it and arrested the woman.

John Robertson was also arrested, he being cyarged with being disorderly and attempting to kill his sister. The woman was bailed.

Just a little over a year ago she saw the body of her sainted mother community in which she died. Just a little over a year ago she saw the body of her sainted mother committed to the tomb. and now she rests by her side "Ins Stille Land." Comely in person, cultivated in mind, amiable in disposition, her presence was like a beam of sunshine that brightened all around her. In early youth she became a member of the Cove Presbyterian Church, in which she was an earnest and zealous worker until her death, not merely conforming to, but living the tenets and precepts of the Christian faith. Never had parents a more loyal and devoted daughter nor sisters and brothers a more affectionate and self-sacrificing sister than she was. In fact, her whole life was dedicated to the pronotion of the welfare and happiness of others, and er chief floasure seemed to be in doing good and geleving distress.

True, she: experienced, in even measure, the foys and sorrows that come to all alike here below, yet her cheerful and, sunny disposition appeared to grow brighter as the shadows of life pointed eveningward.

Acts of kindness done, pangs of sorrow soothed, kind words spoken, forgetfulness of self, suffering borne without a murmur—these, are the things that crown her life's work, and, in my estimation, make it greater than that of many whose deeds are proclaimed in the trumpet tones of fame or graven on "storled urn or monumental bust." It may be truly said that the rille was an open book, which mirrored the thoughts and actions of one-pure in heart and soul. In the dark, sad hours of better and lift of the presence, and that she possessed in high degree the gracious trait

Illustrating How the Laboratories Help

Recently an obstetrician in another city suspected a perversion of metabolism in toxaemia of pregnancy. He set physiologic chemists in various colleges to work to determine what these perversions were by a study of the nitrogen compounds in the urine of a large number of patients with this toxaemia. The deviation from normal was found to be an excess of ammonia and amido compounds, and it was found also that when this excess amounted to as much as 10 per cent. of the total nitrogen, the patient would die unless extreme measures in treatment were immdiately resorted to.

This information was communicated to the profession at large.

A member of the faculty of the UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF MEDICINE promptly put the clinical laboratory of this school to work to endeavor to shorten the process of ascertaining the existence of this perversion, so that this knowledge might be applied without loss of time to the urgent need of the ill patient.

This was accomplished, and this short process was in turn communicated by our pathologist to the profession. It has now become a part of our routine urinary examination to guide the treatment of all cases of this nature. The rebuilding of the UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF MEDICINE will be a direct way of prolonging life in this city.
